The City of Wausau, Mayor Robert Mielke would like more information on what Wausau residents like about their city, and more about what they think can be improved.

During a Plan Commission meeting Tuesday, May 17, 2016, Mayor Mielke said he'd like to get more results via an online survey that he said could have been better publicized.

Paula Priebe, a planner with North Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, said 171 residents found the survey on the city's website and completed it by May 3. Priebe said she has already made the 25-question survey active online and it will be available through mid-June.

When compiled, the survey results will be part of the city's revamped comprehensive plan, but Mielke says he wants the city council to have reliable information on citizen priorities when budget work begins in late summer.
