TRICK-OR-TREATING AND SAFETY FOR EVERYONE

We can all remember the excitement we had as children dressing up in our favorite costumes getting a pillowcase or a pumpkin bucket and going to the neighbors in search of an endless amount of candy. Children from around the area get excited to participate in numerous Halloween events but there are several safety concerns that parents should be aware of.

According to the Center for Disease Control website, children and parents may take several precautions to have the safest Halloween experience. The Center for Disease Control (CDC) recommends that children shouldn't trick-or-treat alone. Staying with a group and having a trusted adult supervise the children dramatically decreases the chances of something happening to a child. Children should also wear reflective clothing and stay on the sidewalk if they can to prevent being hurt from a vehicle.

While sweet treats are what the nights ghosts, mummies, and pirates, are search for, parents should also take a precaution on what their children are consuming. The CDC recommends that parents should check the candy to make sure that it is not a choking hazard for their child and that it has not been tampered with. Parents can check this by making sure that all wrappers are complexly sealed. If there is a wrapper that is open or does not hold air on the inside, do not allow your child to consume that item. It is recommended that children should also avoid eating homemade treats.

Parents should know which route your child takes while trick or treating and establish a curfew if they are trick or treating alone.
