Notes:

Why become a lifeguard?

A lifeguard is an experienced swimmer that is trained in water safety, rescue and life-saving techniques. Lifeguards can often be found at public and private swimming areas. A lifeguard "guards" the swimming area to ensure that people are following safety rules and are not doing things that put themselves and other swimmers in danger.

Lifeguards are trained to spot swimmers in trouble, initiate a rescue effort and perform life-saving techniques such as artificial respiration.

A lifeguard may work at public places such as beaches, pools, schools, athletic associations (YMCA), youth associations (Boys Club), schools and recreation departments. By Cindy Holcomb
